Arab Wins Case Vs. Insurance Institute

Yusef Abdul Hamid, a youth from Akko, who was blinded and crippled by an exploding land mine as he was picking mushrooms near Ma'alot Hahamisha, is entitled to receive monthly compensation payments from the National Insurance Institute, the National Insurance Court ruled on Thursday.

The Institute had disclaimed liability on the grounds that the youth was an independent laborer and therefore not insured under the National Insurance Law and that the accident did not occur in the course of employment. The Court ruled that the boy's relationship with his employer, who was a merchant, was that of hired laborer, although he was paid according to the number of mushrooms he picked. The case was heard by Mr. C. Cohen, head of the Court, and Messrs. Vardi and Levinson, two attorneys who act as representatives of the public.

They strayed into Israel together with an older man and a flock of 150 goats and sheep on Tuesday. The man and the animals were returned on Thursday.

IF we do not get the money bill passed before the Knesset meets in January, argue the bill's defenders, we shall see industrial enterprises built into the heart of our agricultural areas and urbanization proceeding inside our meashvrim. To prove their point, these advocates of the voluntary status of the meashvrim into cities show you letters in which some members of meashvrim who have left the village refuse to give

By this plot, he claims the state government is planning to drive them from their place, so they can continue to live in town. They cite instances of other towns where they intend to turn their people out, building lots, arguing that the law protects them.

It is because the moshav has proved such a material success that desperate attempts are being made to stem a natural development—but the development requires the same. If more and more people come to believe that the ban on hired labour interferes with the progress and growth of the country, it is that in any case the society that the movement's founding fathers had envisaged was emerging according to pattern and law will stem the tide, and by a number of questions which they must try to see the danger ahead, the new moshav have a yet given their consent to the bill's passage. They have threatened to pull to movement should the bill through, it looks as though the proposed law has a chance of passing.

Battle Beginning

Although the battle is beginning—Talmi's movement's monthly, has just published an issue wholly devoted to the problem, with a defence of the law, and quoting the Prophets against each other—the bill's opponents are pessimistic. They point the great influence of the bill's proponents in the Histadrut. They complain that many moshav members experience shows that ways will be found to circumvent it.

The case against the bill appears overwhelming. It proawares and did not understand the difference between statute and law until it was too late. The bill would allow the law should go through to Knesset — and it may be passed not on its merits but as part of some coalition bargain — few movements will have the courage to secede from the movement which — they are bound — such powerful sentimental and economic ties just because they oppose the law.

There is something touching and tragic about veteran members of the Meahav movement, who have devoted their stationary lives to their lives, turning to legislative measures for support for their idea in their last days. They are not out of fear that their tenets will not stand up in the new reality, but also out of a sense of duty.

have a chance to influence developments in the region and upset the calculations of Nasser and Khrushchev, leaving them to take account of Israel's aspirations when it comes to an agreement guaranteeing peace in the region and in the world.

has learnt by trial and error how to turn immigrants' handwork into a commercial proposition. The shop will be a boon to interior decorators who will be able to see all the range of Maasik fabrics and house fittings in one place and buy at the spot. They can give striped waxes, xemite cottons, washable woven brocades designed by George Kelsch of Migdal Ha-Emek and Baghdad, and rush screens and basket work made by Hungarian immigrants in Galilee from materials gathered from the banks of the Jordan and the Hula.
